Hail of bullets from two vehicles

2 hurt in Gaza car ambush

By JOEL GREENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Security forces were searching yesterday for the assailants who opened fire from two cars at an Israeli vehicle near Gaza on Sunday night, seriously wounding an IDF soldier and a civilian.

The soldier was hit by six bullets and wounded in the chest and waist. He was reported to be in stable condition at the intensive care unit of Soroka Hospital in Beersheba. The civilian, whose name was not released, was wounded in the thigh. The East Jerusalem Palestine Press Service said he was a Shin Bet agent.

The Israeli car was attacked at about 9 p.m. as it passed the Jebel refugee camp on the Gaza bypass road. The Israeli passengers fired back.

A curfew was imposed near the area of the incident, and Jebel was closed off with barbed wire barriers.

Soldiers searched the camp and barred exit to residents. Passage to and from the Gaza Strip was banned until 7 a.m. yesterday, when lines of cars carrying labourers to Israel were allowed through IDF checkpoints.

On a tour of the neighbouring development town of Netivot, yesterday, Minister of Industry and Trade, Ariel Sharon, said that the IDF had found solutions to more serious security problems in the Gaza Strip in the past. "Our answer should be not to withdraw from Gaza nor to convene an international peace parity."

When he served as OIC Southern Command in the early 1970s, Sharon had succeeded in "pacifying" the Gaza Strip, after a spate of particularly vicious terrorist attacks on Israeli civilians.

Reuters reported from Beirut yesterday that an anonymous telephone caller claimed that PLO Force

17 was responsible for the ambush. The caller said "A unit of the Force 17 staged an attack Sunday night with machineguns on an Israeli patrol in the Gaza Strip. Several members of the patrol were injured in the assault, while the unit returned to safety."

Force 17 has frequently claimed responsibility for military actions by means of anonymous calls to international media in the Lebanese capital.

In the West Bank, police yesterday arrested a 17-year-old from the village of Tel, south of Nablus, on suspicion of clubbing an Israeli who had stopped at the village to buy figs. Simon Tzoref of Kfar Sava reported the attack on him to police, who traced the assailant according to an eyewitness description. Police believe the attack was politically motivated.

Hess takes his secret to the grave

WEST BERLIN (Reuters). — Rudolf Hess, who died in Spandau prison here yesterday, aged 93, strode side-by-side with Adolf Hitler on the Nazi march to power and parachuted into Britain at the height of World War II. He spent the last four decades of his life in brooding captivity.

As Deputy Fuehrer (leader) he wielded vast influence in the early years of the Third Reich and then amazed the world by flying to Britain on a one-man peace mission on May 10, 1941, when Germany was at the apex of its wartime power.

The mission ended his days of glory, and he was a prisoner for the rest of his life, held since 1946 under heavy guard and at vast expense in the forbidding 600-cell Spandau jail, where for more than 20 years he was the sole inmate.

Hess never gave reasons for his mission to Britain — and it looks as if he may have taken the key to the mystery with him to the grave.

A founder member of the Nazi movement, Hess was given a life sentence at the Nuremberg tribunal in 1946 and was held in Spandau, a Prussian-built military jail in West Berlin.

Hess always refused to recognize the legality of the Nuremberg court and clung to his Nazi views, but he pleaded with the four war victors — the U.S., the Soviet Union, Britain (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

U.S. Air Force Secretary sees Rabin

'Disappointed' if Lavi goes ahead

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Post Defence Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A government decision to go ahead with the Lavi programme will not affect U.S.-Israeli relations although Washington will be disappointed. U.S. Secretary of the Air Force Edward C. Aldridge said yesterday.

In a brief comment to reporters after meeting with Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin, Aldridge reiterated U.S. opposition to the Lavi.

He said a decision to continue building the plane "would not be in the best interests of the Israeli government because of the impact it will have on other programmes which are equally important. It's obviously a very expensive programme and one we think will go up in cost."

Asked how a decision to continue building the Lavi would affect U.S.-Israeli relations, Aldridge said: "I don't think there will be any negative effects. I think we will be disappointed." But, he added, "it will not affect any relationships between the U.S. and the Israeli government."

Earlier, Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin had warned against postponing a decision on the plane's future. Speaking on the IDF Radio yesterday morning, Rabin noted that the U.S. administration had agreed to let Israel use an extra $100m. to cover costs of stopping the Lavi project. This, he said, was conditional on Congress approval, which had to be requested before the next fiscal year.

day morning, Rabin noted that the U.S. administration had agreed to let Israel use an extra $100m. to cover costs of stopping the Lavi project. This, he said, was conditional on Congress approval, which had to be requested before the next fiscal year.

According to Israel Radio, a top U.S. Defence Department official has strongly criticized the Israel government for not cancelling the Lavi project.

The official said that the Pentagon is mobilizing public opinion and will inform the American tax-payer of the tremendous costs that production of the Lavi will incur. He added that the Pentagon is very disappointed with the lack of decision-making in the Israeli cabinet. (Continued on Page 9)

153 die in Detroit air crash

ROMULUS, Michigan. — All 153 people aboard a Northwest Airlines jet which crashed on a highway died in the fiery plunge, the second worst air crash in U.S. history, aviation officials said yesterday.

The plane caught fire seconds after takeoff on Sunday night, clipped a building and plummeted into cars on a busy highway in Romulus, a western suburb of Detroit. In addition to those on board, at least two motorists were killed, it is reported.

"There were no survivors," said Northwest spokeswoman Sandy Dahlan.

The cause of the disaster was not immediately known. Some press reports suggested there might have been a bomb aboard, but federal aviation officials discounted this.

The plane was carrying 147 passengers and six crew.

Horrified motorists who saw the crash said they were unable to help. (Continued on back page)

Shamir wants Romania to boost East bloc ties

By BENNY MORRIS
Post Diplomatic Correspondent

BUCHAREST. — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir intends in his talks with Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu today to ask for Romanian assistance in Israel's quest to improve relations with other East European countries.

Saying this, sources close to Shamir told reporters on the flight to Bucharest yesterday that Shamir earlier in the morning had met with Mordechai Palatur, Israel's representative in Warsaw, to discuss the state of Israeli-Polish relations. Shamir, said the sources, is also interested in the progress of Israeli-Hungarian and Israeli-Yugoslav relations.

The sources said that the Soviet Union had in the past agreed in principle that Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel be routed via Romania. The sources implied that the Soviets have since withdrawn their agreement on this point.

Shamir landed at Bucharest airport last night and was met by his Romanian host, Prime Minister Constantin Dascalescu. A military band played Hatikva and the Romanian national anthem before Shamir was led to the convoy of official limousines that was to take him to the presidential guest house.

There was no mention in yesterday's Bucharest newspapers of the impending visit by Shamir, but it is understood that the visit will figure prominently in today's newspapers. The Romanian news agency's announcement of Shamir's arrival was carried on the electronic media here shortly after the plane landed.

Sources in the Shamir entourage speculated that President Ceausescu had invited Shamir mainly in the hope of persuading American Jews to influence the U.S. government to restore Romania's preferential trade status, which it has suspended. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Arab arrested in UK, arms cache discovered

LONDON (AP). — Anti-terrorist detectives have arrested an Arab and uncovered a cache of explosives and weapons destined to be used in terrorist attacks throughout Europe, Scotland Yard said yesterday. The discovery came in the investigation of the attempted assassination last month of one of the Arab world's most controversial political cartoonists, Ali Naji Awad al-Adhami.

Adhami, who was shot in the head on July 22 while walking on a London street, remains in critical condition on a life-support.

Scotland Yard announced that detectives raided an apartment in Hull, northeast England, last Wednesday and arrested an Arab. No charges have been brought against him. A second Arab was held for questioning in London but was to be released later yesterday.

The munitions seized included 31kg. of explosives, four assault rifles, seven hand grenades, bomb-making equipment such as detonators and clocks and a variety of ammunition and magazines. The announcement said, "All the items were hidden in the flat and, we believe, were being stored for future terrorist attacks Europe-wide."

"The hunt for the attempted assassin of Mr. Adhami continues," it said.

Adhami, a Palestinian, worked for the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Qabas and was an outspoken critic of not only Israel but also the Palestine Liberation Organization and many facets of Arab life and politics.

Scotland Yard did not explain why the announcement was delayed so long after the raid took place early last Wednesday. Such delays are not uncommon in terrorism investigations.

Shaikhe Ophir dies at 58

TEL AVIV (Itim). — Shaikhe Ophir, one of the country's leading actors, mimes and entertainers, died here yesterday at the age of 58.

His body will lie in state at the Mann Auditorium from 1 p.m. today, and the funeral coterage will leave for the Nahlat Yitzhak cemetery at 3 p.m. Prof. Dan Michaeli, the head of Ichilov Hospital, where Ophir died, said that the cause of death had been complications from a growth in the lungs.

Ophir was born and raised in a Jerusalem haredi family. He left school at a young age, to join the Palmah underground in the years leading up to the 1948 War of Independence. It was during that military service that he became one of the founders of the army's entertainment troupe, the Chizbatron, and its star.

Some recruits to sleep with 'knees bent'

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
TEL AVIV. — Fewer soldiers will be forced to sleep with their feet sticking out of bed in future.

The army's General Staff decided yesterday that the beds it orders from now on will be 1.90 metres long, and this is expected to solve the problem of all but six per cent of new recruits. The present IDF beds are a few centimetres shorter.

A recent study of 1,550 soldiers showed that on average they are three centimetres taller than those recruited ten years ago, hence the decision to order longer beds.

As for exceptionally tall soldiers, "Let them sleep with bent knees," a senior officer told The Jerusalem Post.

Arafat said due soon in Moscow

Jerusalem Post Staff
PLO Chief Yasser Arafat will reportedly soon visit Moscow, his first visit to the Soviet Union since the reconciliation between the various PLO factions last spring.

Moscow has been trying to initiate additional reconciliation moves, and particularly to mediate between Arafat and his arch-foe Syrian president Hafez Assad.

A unified PLO and Syrian line on an Arab-Israeli peace settlement could smooth the way for Moscow to take a strong negotiating position at any international peace conference.

Politicians praise Mark Segal

Condolence messages were also received yesterday from former Histadrut secretary-general Aharon Becker and the office of the spokesman of the Jewish National Fund.

Peres issues plea: Choose Lavi

By ASHER WALLFISH
Post Knesset Correspondent

"If the Lavi warplane project is abandoned, something will be lost in the self-confidence of the nation," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday.

While insisting that there was nothing reprehensible in not holding the vote at Sunday's cabinet meeting, Peres revealed that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had agreed to hold the vote, next Sunday, and not to allow two weeks to elapse.

Briefing the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee, Peres said: "In money terms, it is hard to put a price on certain things."

Peres claimed that the cabinet is now equally divided about the future of the Lavi, 12 against 12, with one minister still undecided. This was the position after Minister without Portfolio Yigal Hurvitz had told him yesterday that he had changed his mind and would support the proposal to add another $15 million to the defence budget.

Peres said that Israel Aircraft Industries represented the pinnacle of Israeli technology and scrapping the Lavi would mean surrendering the national technology.

"We cannot turn a deaf ear to the professional opinion uttered by the Chief of Staff Rav Aluf Dan Shomron against the Lavi, but we must also remember that what is at stake is the future of the state of Israel."

"The Lavi project will bring a revolution to this country."

Peres stressed that between 3,000 and 4,000 engineers would remain jobless if the Lavi project were halted.

He said that during the Yom Kippur War, the IAI was able to repair and service damaged aircraft speedily and turn them around so that they could return to battle. "We must ensure that the IAI is still in a position to do so once again."

Peres said he did not propose new taxes at Sunday's cabinet meeting.

He had proposed abolishing tax cuts recently granted to 17,000 taxpayers in the highest bracket. "Was it really necessary to grant them that rebate, worth a total of $200m.?" he asked rhetorically.

"If we have to choose between the Lavi and our standard of living, our choice must go to the Lavi," said Peres.

David Magen (Likud) and Rabbi Haim Druckman (National Religious Party) lauded Peres's statement to the committee, while Shevah Weiss (Alignment) said that the prospect of higher taxes should not deter the Knesset if the Lavi was essential.

Yosef Sarid (Citizens Rights Movement) said the plan to increase the defence budget by $150m. was a figment of Peres's imagination. Rafael Eitan (Tehiya) said that those who demanded a choice between the Lavi and the weapons systems required for tomorrow's battlefield were "frauds" since nobody could know who tomorrow's enemy would be, nor the weapons he would deploy.

Elazar Granot (Mapam) said the money wasted by the cabinet's vacillation over the Lavi was enough to ease the financial plight of all the nation's old-age pensioners considering that it costs $1.4m. daily to proceed with the project.

In Netivot yesterday, Industry and Trade Minister Ariel Sharon said Israel should go ahead with the Lavi. "All the opinion polls show that the vast majority of the nation wants the Lavi."

Sharon said that the project was important because of the possibility of an arms embargo and because it provided employment opportunities all over the country.

Sharon visited industrial enterprises in Netivot, as well as the grave of the Moroccan Jewish holy man Baba Sali. The minister was awarded honorary citizenship of Netivot.

Sources in IAI:

Treasury trying to kill project before gov't vote

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Post Defence Reporter

Senior Israel Aircraft Industry sources tacitly accused treasury officials yesterday of taking the law into their own hands by failing to provide funds to keep the Lavi programme going.

The IAI sources claimed that, by not providing the funds for July — and probably August — the Treasury was trying to end the programme even before the Cabinet voted on the issue. The IAI would not say how much money was involved.

In a sharply-worded hand-out to the press, the sources said that until another decision is made, the original decision to build the Lavi still stands.

The funds have been allocated, they stressed. The sources, who declined to be named, added that certain Cabinet ministers were "furious" that Treasury officials were violating a cabinet decision. However, the officials would not identify the ministers.

"I don't want to give you names," one source said. "Several ministers spoke."

mented yesterday that the Lavi project would have run out of money in October, regardless of any cabinet decision.

The Knesset Finance Committee several weeks ago approved a special additional allocation of $150m. for the Lavi to carry it through until October. The Israel Aircraft Industries is simply not authorized to spend any additional funds on procurement for the Lavi, the sources said. Even if the cabinet decides to approve additional budgets for the Lavi it would still require approval by the Knesset Finance Committee.

East J'lem shopowners strike over cut in JDEC's concession

By JOEL GREENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Arab shopkeepers in East Jerusalem closed their shop shutters yesterday and employees of the Jerusalem District Electricity Company staged a sit-in to protest the recent cabinet decision to reduce the firm's concession to exclude Jewish areas. The company's Board of Directors decided at a meeting to defer its response to the cabinet move.

The board was briefed on details of last week's cabinet decision by company lawyer Shlomo Toussia-Cohen. It decided to study the resolution until Thursday, when it is expected to announce its position. Sources at the meeting said board members tended to accept the cabinet decision on the grounds that a rejection would provide the Energy Minister with a pretext for a total takeover of the firm.

The cabinet decided last week to renew the JDEC's concession until the year 2000, but changed its terms to exclude West Bank settlements and army bases and Jewish neighbourhoods in Jerusalem across the Green Line. The current 60-year concession expires at the end of this year. The Energy Ministry has promised to assist the JDEC with loans to help it cover the NIS 33m. it owes to the Israel Electric Corporation from which it buys 95 per cent of its power.

Most shops on Salah al-Din Street, East Jerusalem's main shopping thoroughfare, were closed yesterday. JDEC workers gathered near the company building, where they were visited by representatives of Palestinian professional and women's groups.

A petition circulated by the workers charged that the cabinet decision served Israeli political interests and made the Palestinians even more economically dependent on Israel. The petition urged the company board to refuse to comply with the Israeli decision, and called on Arab states to give the firm financial, political and legal support.

The JDEC union is vehemently opposed to the new concession terms, which call for the firing of 200 of the company's 450 workers to streamline the company's operations. They charge that the cabinet decision was coordinated with Jordan, and constitutes a first step toward a total Israeli takeover of the firm, which is the largest Palestinian economic concern in the West Bank.

The arrest of eight Jerusalemites since June has led the police to believe they are on the trail of a gang of thieves specializing in breaking into automobiles and stealing radio-cassette players on order, Idm reported yesterday. Stolen players worth more than $30,000 have been recovered, a police spokesman said.

The sources suggested that Ceausescu is also interested in a substantial improvement in Israeli-Romanian trade.

The Romanians have pointedly included a visit to the Delta car factory in Shamir's itinerary for Wednesday. Today, Shamir is scheduled to hold two rounds of talks with Ceausescu and a separate meeting with Prime Minister Dascalescu. Tomorrow Shamir is scheduled to meet Romanian Chief Rabbi Moshe Rosen and to visit Bucharest's main synagogue before going to the Carpathian mountains for a day-long trip.

It is understood that among the bilateral issues Shamir will raise will be the speeding up of the process for the adoption of Romanian babies by Israeli couples. The average adoption currently takes 18 months.

Ophir toured abroad often, especially in the U.S. and South Africa. He appeared in more than 30 Israeli films, his most notable roles being in "The Policeman Azulay", and "Abu-t-Banar" (the father of daughters). He was a frequent participant in TV entertainment shows.

Expressing his sorrow at Shaikie Ophir's death, Minister of Education and Culture Yitzhak Navon said yesterday that "Shaikie Ophir was one of the giants of Israel's entertainment world, and its most gifted son."

Arab housing plan for Jerusalem passes first hurdle

By ANDY COURT

The Jerusalem municipality's planning committee yesterday approved a master plan that would allow Arab residents to build 10,000 homes in the northern sections of the city.

In the absence of a master plan, some Arabs have been waiting for years for building proposals to be approved. The planning board's decision marks the first sign of progress in two years.

But sources familiar with the plan cautioned that Interior Ministry officials might try to block it or reduce the number of dwelling units permitted when it comes before the District Planning Commission and to the Interior Minister for his signature.

The master plan was presented publicly over three years ago but it became tied up in the District Planning Commission in 1985, and was sent back to the city for revision.

"The compromise version approved yesterday is too little, too late, and even this is likely to run up against opposition which could delay it further," Ze'ev Baran, an architect who helped draft part of the original master plan said.

The master plan covers an area of about 10,000 dunams south of the Atarot airport. Its borders are the city boundary to the west and the Jewish neighbourhoods of Neve Ya'acov and Pisgat Ze'ev to the east. The land is privately owned, and would be developed according to individual plans submitted by the property owners.

The figure of 10,000 dwelling units represents a compromise between the views of the city which originally proposed around 16,000 units, and the Housing Ministry, which said it was concerned about the demographic balance in the city and wanted to allow only 6,000 units.

Deputy Mayor Avraham Kehila, chairman of the city's planning committee, said that the Interior Ministry has also agreed to the 10,000 unit

The original master plan was detailed "and related specifically to the locations of roads, schools, and other major planning considerations."

However, the general master plan approved by the planning board yesterday is much less specific, and more a "letter of intent," Baran said.

Israel-Soviet talks on M-E held in Bonn

By BENNY MORRIS
Post Diplomatic Correspondent

A senior Israeli and a senior Soviet official held secret talks on Middle East peace in Bonn over the weekend, sources in Jerusalem said yesterday. Dr. Nimrod Novick, political adviser to Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, and Vladimir Terrasov focused on the nature and composition of a prospective international conference for Middle East peace and on Israeli conditions for Soviet participation.

Terrasov is deputy to Vladimir Polyakov, who is responsible for Middle East policy in the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

In talks with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy in Geneva last month, Polyakov said the Soviets intended to renew the "political dialogue" with Israel "within a few weeks." The Novick-Terrasov meeting was apparently the fulfilment of that promise.

The last direct, high-level Israel-Soviet contacts took place in April when Peres, visiting Rome, met with two senior Soviet officials. Israeli-Soviet diplomatic contacts were formally resumed last August in Helsinki where delegations from the two countries met for 90 minutes without any immediate result.

Briefing the Knesset Foreign Relations and Defence Committee on the talks yesterday, Peres said that "there is room for cautious optimism."

But he said that Novick and Terrasov, in 10 hours of conversation, had failed to bridge Israeli-Soviet differences on the structure of the conference and the future of Israeli-Soviet relations.

The Soviet attitude, said Peres, is still being formulated, and it is impossible to tell whether the differences can be bridged in good time.

The Novick-Terrasov conversation renewed the hopes that the Soviets, who severed relations with Jerusalem in 1967 following the Six Day War, are now, under Mikhail Gorbachev, seriously considering the renewal of diplomatic ties.

'Family reunification a test of glasnost'

By WALTER RUBY
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS. — Israeli Ambassador to the UN Benjamin Netanyahu demanded yesterday that the Soviet Union allow the reunification of families separated by Soviet emigration policies. He stressed that "Mr. Gorbachev must know the testing of glasnost will be a daily event" between now and the next U.S.-Soviet summit meeting.

Netanyahu spoke at a press conference here at which he appeared with four Soviet emigres living in Israel, all of whom have immediate family members in the USSR denied exit visas for at least 10 years, ostensibly because they were privy to "state secrets."

classified material. But in the present situation, the case is absurd and exaggerated.

In addition to Gonorovsky, Henrietta Fridman spoke on behalf of her husband Kim, who has been refused a visa since 1973; Asia Plushchanskaya appealed for freedom for her daughter Natalia Rozenstela, refused a visa since 1973; and Inna Yakot appealed for the liberation of her brother Vladimir, a former prisoner of conscience, who has been applying to emigrate since 1971.

Netanyahu revealed that he had on various occasions taken up the case of individual Soviet Jews with UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. The UN head had intervened with the Soviet government in the case of Inna Fleurov, who was allowed to emigrate by the Soviets after months of delay so as to donate bone marrow to her cancer-stricken brother Mikhail Shirman. Shirman died before he could be helped by the bone marrow.

In announcing the decision to cancel today's session, court president Dov Levin said that the defence had only two witnesses lined up for the four sessions scheduled until next Tuesday. From that date, August 25, till September 7, the court will be in recess because some of the judges have to sit on other cases.

Levin announced that the defence had informed the bench of its decision not to call Mrs. Vera Demjanjuk as a witness, although she is available and has been attending the trial daily.

Defence counsel John Gill yesterday led Mrs. Prichard through a description of her professional qualifications.

Born in Sweden, she took an M.A. in psychology at the University of Oklahoma and is now a doctoral candidate at the University of the Pacific at Stockton, California. "I would be defending my thesis now, if not for my presence here today," she said.

She has studied grapho-analysis and art, and is a member of Wade, the World Association of Document Examiners, of which the previous witness, Edna Robertson, is the president. She has published a book on Identifying Faces From Handwriting.

News blackout 'so Iran won't have time to lay mines'

U.S. helicopters 'rehearse' for Gulf convoy

BAHRAIN. — U.S. minehunting helicopters yesterday staged a dress rehearsal for steering a convoy of Kuwaiti tankers through the Gulf as secrecy surrounded the start of the escort mission to limit any threat from Iran.

One Gulf shipping source close to the operation said a news blackout was imposed on the convoy's movement so that Iran would not have time to lay fresh mines in the path of the reflagged tankers and their escort of American warships.

"News reports in the past have given the Iranians 36 hours lead time," he said.

The supertanker Bridgeton was holed by a mine on the first convoy to Kuwait last month and the second convoy was held up for 36 hours last week when a mine was found on its route.

Four tankers including the Bridgeton were waiting off Kuwait while the U.S. Navy cranked up its minehunting force of Sea Stallion helicopters aboard the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal off Bahrain.

Witnesses monitoring Gulf activity from chartered vessels said the 11,000-ton Guadalcanal moved to within about 12 miles of Bahrain from the mid-Gulf area.

The warship was first spotted there Sunday following a secrecy-shrouded passage through the Strait of Hormuz, the Gulf's narrow gateway.

Iranian President Ali Khomeini warned yesterday that the U.S. faces "an uncertain future in the Persian Gulf," Tehran Radio reported.

In a broadcast monitored in Cyprus, the state radio reported him as saying: "If our ships are attacked by Iraq, we will undoubtedly hit at ships belonging to Iraq's allies with the U.S. flag or the flag of any other state flying above them."

Meanwhile, a sophisticated Soviet salvage tug has sailed into northern Gulf waters and taken up station near the Guadalcanal, shipping sources in the region said yesterday.

Shipping sources said the tug apparently was observing the Guadalcanal from "a safe distance" of about five kilometres.

The ship had previously remained outside of the waterway, serving as a resupply vessel for four Soviet warships in the region.

Meanwhile, two task forces of British and French minehunters set sail for the Gulf yesterday as Britain made it clear it resented the failure of other European allies to help minesweeping operations in waters of the oil lifeline.

Britain's four 675-ton Hunt Class minesweepers and a support ship should reach the Gulf within five weeks after a 6,000 mile voyage from Rosyth in Scotland, defence officials said.

France said its three minesweepers and one supply ship, being sent to the Mediterranean port of Toulon, should join a French aircraft carrier task force already in the Indian Ocean within two weeks.

On the war front, Iraq said its fighter-bombers attacked an oilfield near Ahvaz in southwest Iran.

Iran said its gunners shelled "military and industrial targets" in the Iraqi port of Umm Qasr yesterday in retaliation for Iraqi attacks in villages in Western Iran and "industrial units" in oil-rich Khuzestan province.

Iran denied Iraqi reports that Iranian heavy artillery had pounded Basra, Iraq's second largest city. In the sea of Oman, five men missing when a mine sank a small supply vessel on Saturday are "presumed dead" and the search for the wreckage has been temporarily abandoned. (AP, Reuters)

30,000 S. Koreans clash with police

SEOUL (Reuters). — A bitter protest by up to 30,000 workers at South Korea's top exporter Hyundai ended yesterday after day-long skirmishes with police, but the demonstrators vowed to return if their demands were not met.

Witnesses said at least 30 workers were injured in protests at six plants at Hyundai's main industrial base in the southern city of Ulsan. The often violent demonstrations began when Hyundai locked out its workers.

The workers battered down factory gates, smashed windows and over-ran barricades to occupy the plants, which included shipyards and heavy-machinery factories. They broke up furniture at one cafeteria when the company refused to provide food.

They clashed sporadically and violently with at least 50 bus-loads of riot police as the workers spilled out onto nearby streets, witnesses said.

The influential daily Dong-a Ilbo said the 30,000 workers ended the protests when union leaders exhorted them to give management one more day to meet demands for higher pay and independent unions.

Witnesses said 1,000 workers, angered because power, food and water were cut off at company dormitories, staged a protest sit-in after the main protest ended.

In Seoul, labour unrest spread to the country's lucrative tourism industry when chefs and other employees struck at the luxury-class 1,000-room Lotte Hotel in the centre of the capital.

Three hundred strikers rallied in the hotel lobby and then occupied a coffee shop. Management closed the hotel's two dozen restaurants and began talks with the workers.

The Labour Ministry said 299 companies were hit by labour disputes yesterday, against 283 Sunday, mostly in mining, manufacturing and transport. Trade officials said the unrest has cost about $300 million in lost production and exports.

The strikes, for higher pay and against the country's restrictive labour laws, have closed down South Korea's car industry, crippled electronics production and snarled public transport in provincial cities.

No accord on strike violence

JOHANNESBURG (AFP). — Strike leaders and the mining giant Anglo American failed to reach agreement yesterday on how to curb violence between strikers clashing with security forces in South Africa's biggest ever strike.

Leaders of the powerful National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) and Anglo American Corporation bosses emerged from three hours of talks here saying they would resume discussions today to try and resolve strike violence.

Two men have been killed in the strike. NUM's press secretary Marcel Golding claimed that about 300 NUM members had been injured since the strike began eight days ago.

The strike has cost the industry some $55 million in lost revenue since it started eight days ago.

Siege lifted on Saudi embassy in Teheran

RIYADH (AP). — The Iranians have lifted a two-week siege on the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Teheran and allowed the Saudi flag to fly again over the premises, the chief Saudi diplomat in the Iranian capital was quoted as saying yesterday.

But the slight easing of tension, following the death of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims in the Mecca riots of July 31 suffered a setback at the same time with the reported expulsion from Saudi Arabia of the supervisor of the Iranian pilgrims in Mecca.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the supervisor and six other Iranian officials were arrested Sunday night. They were put on a plane and deported to Teheran after being held for more than 17 hours.

Chad's military victories worry France

France applauded last spring when the forces of Chad's President Hissene Habré cleared the Libyans out of the northern desert region of his country in brilliantly conceived attacks on Libyan-held oases.

Hundreds of dead and tons of arms, including Soviet-made tanks and missiles, were left strewn on the sand as the Libyans withdrew.

Last week, Hissene Habré advanced even further north, capturing Aouzou, the village capital of a narrow strip of desert along Libya's southern border. Here again the Chadian forces won an instant victory over Gaddafi's army which, on paper, is the most formidable in North Africa.

It was at this point that France's smile of pride in Chad's military prowess began to freeze. The sparsely inhabited Aouzou strip, which is said to contain rich oil, manganese and uranium deposits, is disputed territory. Gaddafi occupied it in 1973 when the idea of a weak and divided Chad defeating its powerful northern neighbour was unimaginable. Although Chad's claim seems stronger than Libya's, the French had advised Habré to place his case before the international court at The Hague.

When Habré was the guest of honour last month at the Bastille Day military parade in Paris, President François Mitterrand warned him that he could expect no French logistic support if he snatched at Aouzou.

France both arms Chad and bases a French garrison of 1,300 men with warplanes and ground-to-air missiles in the southern part of the country below the 16th parallel. The French expeditionary force was sent to defend Chad and its capital, N'Djamena, at a time when the Libyans threatened to overrun the whole country.

But to ensure that France did not become embroiled in an African Vietnam, Mitterrand decreed that the French would only strike back if the invaders crossed the 16th parallel.

Since then Habré has tried without success to persuade the French to move north with him. Habré's French military advisers were confident this spring that Chad, politically united at last after 20 years of civil war, was strong enough to defeat the Libyans without help. The northern desert victory aroused all the more enthusiasm among the Chadian population because their soldiers fought alone.

Chad claimed that 437 Libyans were killed in the battle for Aouzou with the loss of only 17 Chadians. But Aouzou is right up against Libya's frontier; to hold it Habré's men must face constant bombardment by Libyan Soviet-built MiGs.

Jeepney strike cripples transport

MANILA (Reuters). — Drivers of Manila's colourful jeepneys challenged President Aquino's government yesterday with a crippling one-day transport strike, but Aquino rejected their demand to rescind a 20 per cent rise in fuel prices.

Aquino defended the increase as necessary to replenish a fund subsidising petrol prices.

Offices sent employees home early, schools suspended classes and the army fielded scores of garbage and 10-wheeler trucks to ferry thousands of commuters stranded by the first major work stoppage to hit the 18-month-old government.

Jeepneys, elongated jeeps converted into mini-buses and painted in garish, psychedelic colours, are the main mode of transport in the Philippines and about 60,000 operate in this metropolis of eight million people.

Second British septuplet dies

LIVERPOOL (Reuters). — Doctors yesterday reported the death of another of the septuplets born to a 27-year-old British woman and said the five remaining babies faced a tough battle for survival.

The septuplets — four girls and three boys — had a combined weight at birth of four kilos and were delivered by caesarian section four months prematurely on Saturday.

One of the boys died within half an hour.

Doctors said a girl died early yesterday.

Dr. Richard Cooke, of Liverpool Maternity Hospital, said the surviving babies were in the intensive care unit and breathing with the help of ventilators.

Karamah murder suspect to be freed

BEIRUT. — Charges were dropped yesterday against one of two people detained in connection with the murder last June of Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karamah, officials said.

Judicial officials said army sergeant Ibrahim Dagher would be set free after charges of facilitating Karamah's murder and violating state security were dropped for lack of evidence.

Meanwhile, Palestinian terrorists and Shi'ite Moslem militiamen traded mortar and machine gun fire for a third day near Sidon yesterday, straining a Syrian-brokered truce.

Police said at least three people were killed and 12 wounded since the sporadic skirmishes started on Friday in hills commanding the coastal highway linking predominantly Shi'ite South Lebanon with Beirut.

In addition, Lebanon's authorities started rationing fuel oil yesterday because the country has enough to last for only 45 days. Economy, Industry and Oil Minister Victor Kassir said. (Reuters, AP)

Suspect arrested in Philadelphia corpses case

PHILADELPHIA (Reuters). — A man hunted for a week after the discovery of seven corpses in his dilapidated apartment was arrested Sunday when his mother told the authorities where to find him, police said.

Harrison Graham, 28, who has been charged with seven counts of abuse of corpses, was arrested without incident.

Two of the bodies found in Graham's apartment were black women strangled about four days before they were found last Sunday.

The other corpses were reduced to skeletons and could have been dead for several years, police said.

New Agers hold hands in 'Harmonic Convergence'

CAIRO (Reuters). — Two ancient cultures were married yesterday in a ceremony of "Harmonic Convergence" when disciples of Egypt's great pyramids to sing to the stars.

"Dancing circles in the night... music to the stars to be dancing circles in the night," the so-called New Agers chanted before disappearing into the desert to meditate.

They were expecting the Aztec serpent god, Quetzalcoatl, to return to earth to restore harmonic convergence to the galaxy and usher in a new era of peace and love. New Agers believe that yesterday marked the last day of Nine Cycles of Hell which began on April 22, 1519. They say the Aztec god of death, Tezcatlipoca, will lift his jade mask and uncover the hidden face of his oppressor, Quetzalcoatl.

So followers of the movement converged simultaneously on the 13 sites they consider sacred around the world, from Egypt to Peru, Mexico to Japan, to hold hands and herald the new dawn with tom-tom drums and conchshells. They also met in New York's Central Park on Hampstead Heath in London, and California's Mt. Shasta.

"August 17 is the morning that we greet the Lord of the Dawn and one of the important ways we can express this greeting is by playing the conchshells," said Jim Berenholtz, spiritual leader of the 75 New Agers who made the pilgrimage to Egypt.

Wearing the head of a petrified serpent tied to a headband and holding the plumed serpent symbol of Quetzalcoatl in his hand, Berenholtz, of Taos, New Mexico, said the simultaneous rituals would connect the sacred sites.

Sitting on a rock beneath the 4,300-year-old Pyramid of Cheops, he said the New Agers would create energy to heal the earth.

"The body of the earth is similar to our own body. Just like one can do acupuncture with needles to send energy moving to different points to the earth... so these pyramids are the acupuncture needles of the body of the earth," he said.

Around him, men and women, including a faith healer and a used-car salesman, milled about awaiting the sunrise. Some carried broomsticks or flags bearing the colours of the rainbow.

Interest in yesterday's observance apparently stemmed from the book The Mayan Factor: Path Beyond Technology, by Jose Arguelles.

Basing his argument on Mayan, Aztec, Hopi and Gregorian calendars and on the alignment of the planets, Arguelles argued that the world had neared the end of a 5,125-year cycle and yesterday marked the start of a new age.

Critics say that Arguelles's book is undocumented and merely manipulates the dates.

Moscow makes the most concessions

Soviets seen coming round to INF deal

WASHINGTON (Reuters). — The Soviet Union has made most of the concessions that have brought the superpowers close to a new arms agreement and probably will give way on its stand against the Pershing-IA missile as well, U.S. officials and analysts say.

But while the deal to scrap intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) worldwide is shaping up as strongly favouring the U.S. position, most experts say it is simplistic to conclude that one side is the winner and the other side the loser.

"I think that rarely is there a net victor, somebody who stole the deal from the other side," Harvard University defence analyst Ashton Carter said. "We're all too careful for that."

Senior U.S. arms control official Kenneth Adelman has boasted that the approaching INF deal "is basically on our terms," and many experts agree.

"To reach this moment of opportunity, the two sides have come a long way... with the Soviet Union making essentially all the concessions," said Spurgeon Keeny of the independent Arms Control Association.

These include the Soviet Union abandoning demands such as:

— British and French nuclear forces must be included in negotiations;

— an agreement on INF weapons in Europe, including Soviet SS4 and SS20 missiles and U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles with a range of 1,000 to 5,000 kilometres, be linked to an accord on strategic weapons and space defences;

— that shorter-range INF missiles, which travel 500km. to 1,000km. be negotiated separately;

— That Moscow retain 100 INF warheads in Asia.

Moreover, if the pact is signed this year as many expect, the Soviets would have to destroy more than 1,400 warheads while the Americans would only lose 316.

"It's quite unusual to see an unbalanced equilibrium of concessions" like this," said Ambassador Gerard Smith, who helped negotiate the 1972 Strategic Arms Limitations Treaty.

"The general impression is that the Soviets seem to be more anxious for a deal than we are."

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev seized the arms control propaganda advantage, at least in Europe, with a series of concessions since February that surprised many U.S. analysts and injected momentum into moribund U.S.-Soviet talks at Geneva.

U.S. officials believe the credit is undeserved because, they say, Moscow adopted an untenable position in 1981 when President Reagan first proposed destroying all INF missiles.

"If the Soviets start off with an outrageous position and we start out with a reasonable position, then to get an agreement that's worthwhile, they've got to make many more concessions than we have," said one senior U.S. official.

With Gorbachev's bold new leadership and creativity, it seems, the Soviets have come to realize "it can make more sense to sacrifice greater numbers of weapons... to achieve a desirable objective," one Soviet watcher said.

Getting ready for 1988

Edwin Black

UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar (Michael Kahn)

ble. He acknowledged as much, but said he would be guided by a decision of the 17 member states that constituted the original war crimes commission. The 17 will be polled during a meeting, probably in Geneva, scheduled for September 22.

Thus far, 15 of the 17 have declared their willingness to open the files. UN sources will not identify the two holdouts, but it is reliably learned that Poland and France are still undecided. Holocaust researchers explained that French officials fear that open files might expose dozens of Vichy collaborators still alive. And Polish officials know that many war atrocities were actually committed by Poles still alive, especially those of German extraction.

The Israel government has already secured some 2,400 of the files as a UN member. Yad Vashem is storing them, but under binding confidentiality. Hence, even Yad Vashem, which maintains no closed archives, may not make them available to historians. Ambassador Yohanan Bein, Israel's deputy representative to the UN, derides the secrecy, declaring, "It must be overturned. We are talking about the future of our past, understanding that those who do not remember their past indeed have no future."

Reich also raised the question of the annual anti-Zionist resolution challenging Israel's credentials. And as Secretary General was preserved.

BUT THE GREATEST emphasis was placed on overturning the Zionism-is-racism resolution. "The UN cannot cleanse itself procedurally or substantively until that resolution is expunged," Reich told the UN chief. Focusing on November 10, the 12th anniversary of the resolution, Reich explained that "November 10 is also the anniversary of Kristallnacht [1938]. We mark that as the violent beginning of the Holocaust." The irony of the dates, Reich maintained, was only appropriate to the true context of the resolution's anti-Semitism.

The Secretary General was moved. The question of rescinding the resolution was laid on the table. "He was very understanding of our situation," reports Morris Abram, chairman of the Presidents' Conference, but he was unable as secretary general to express any specific parity. Nonetheless, Jewish leaders came away with the feeling that he would support a move to repeal the resolution.

"We can go either of two ways," explained Abe Foxman, national director of ADL and co-chairman of the delegation: "either ask to repeal the original resolution, or pass a new resolution that neutralizes it."

There are pros and cons. "Out-right rescission would grip the world like a thunderbolt," says Abram. "And make the UN a more moral force." But Foxman wondered whether member nations might not support more readily a new supplanting resolution, rather than vote to rescind the old one, and thus admit that they had voted for an anti-Semitic decree. "On the other hand," Foxman says, "if a new resolution asserts, for example, that Zionism is the legitimate national movement of the Jewish people, you would have two conflicting resolutions."

Moreover, parliamentarians are unsure whether a UN resolution can in fact be repealed. The best idea seemed to be a two-part resolution that nullifies the original and then asserts the legitimacy of the Zionist movement. Several member nations, such as Australia, have already passed resolutions in their national legislatures declaring Resolution #3379 morally repulsive. Foxman was hopeful that one of these countries would lead the campaign in the General Assembly.

"True, the present resolution is only words," Foxman says. But in some countries it can be used as a pretext to delegitimize the Jewish people. For instance, the Zimbabwe minister of information has asked the Jewish community to delete the word "Zionism" from the name of its Jewish publication, Zionist Digest. The rationale is that the UN has proclaimed Zionism to be racism."

Edwin Black's weekly syndicated column is published by Jewish newspapers in 50 cities in North America.

SAN FRANCISCO (JTA). - The United Israel Appeal, the central channel for money raised in the U.S. for use by the Jewish Agency, has voted to condemn the Jewish Federation here for diverting $100,000 from the Agency to fund its own Israel program.

Nevertheless, officials of the Jewish Community Federation of San Francisco (JCF) say that their action succeeded in calling attention to the need to reform the Jewish Agency's funding process. The JCF maintains that a broad spectrum of American Jews - both inside and outside that multimillion dollar philanthropic organization - now agree that reforms are necessary.

The JCF resolution was adopted by its board last June in Jerusalem, but it has been made public only now.

It declares opposition to "the actions of the San Francisco Federation in allocating funds and supporting programs in Israel outside the normal process of the Jewish Agency and outside the united system of funding in the U.S."

JCF leaders insist, however, that their message, if not the means of the Federation's campaign for reform, were endorsed overwhelmingly by the assembly.

But it was the means that the JCF addressed in its resolution - because of the fear that other federations might follow San Francisco's lead and divert money from the Jewish Agency.

While many Jewish leaders agree with the JCF's goal, they don't agree with the idea of diverting money from the Agency.

The JCF last year sought to send a signal to the Jewish Agency to alter its funding priorities by allocating $100,000 directly to special projects aimed at promoting democracy in Israel, including Arab-Israeli relations; and encouraging religious pluralism in Israel.

JCF leaders, heartened that their programme appeared to have won the backing of others, cited the following:

□ A resolution passed at the Jewish Agency assembly called on the Agency, with its annual $400 million budget, to be "responsive to innovative programmes and services in Israel" and to develop a mechanism of funding those programmes under Agency auspices.

□ Two other resolutions asked the Agency to look into projects that would promote Israel-Diaspora links on the model of Project Renewal and involve Israeli citizens without regard to party affiliation.

□ A Louis Harris poll, made public at the assembly, found that close to half the respondents gave a negative rating to the way the Agency allocates its funds.

Former JCF president Ron Kaufman said that the UJA move was a matter of bad timing. Kaufman, a member of the UJA Board whose report defending the JCF strategy prompted the condemnatory resolution, called the assembly delegates' acceptance of the San Francisco-backed reform resolutions "a real framework for change."

But even before that happens, the JCF set aside another $100,000 earmarked for its projects outside Jewish Agency channels. The JCF's regular allocation to the Agency this year comes a record $7.8 million.

And while Agency officials still may reject the Federation's tactics, JCF overseas committee chairman Richard Goldman is convinced that both its method and its message are necessary catalysts for change. "The fact that the Jewish Agency has come around to our way of thinking indicates that we have been sending positive signals all along," he said.

JCF president Laurence Myers sought to downplay the JCF's role. "Sure we can take some credit for the changes now afoot, but it's also critical to recognize that those resolutions passed by the Jewish Agency were drafted by the Council of Jewish Federations - 29 of which have overseas committees - thus representing a groundswell of support."

A Post reporter adds: Of the $100,000 earmarked by the San Francisco federation last September, grants were approved some months ago for three projects, according to Shlomo Laqueur, director of its Jerusalem office.

These are: □ $24,600 to Tel Aviv University's in-service training programme for principals, the project being aimed specifically at combating anti-Arab prejudice;

□ $13,250 to the Van Leer Institute for public and secondary school projects promoting democratic pluralism;

□ $8,000 to Telem, the movement for Zionist hagshama (realization), for a centre in Jerusalem's Katamonim.

In April, Goldman headed a mission to Jerusalem which met with the JCF's 15-member Israeli "Amuta" board to decide jointly on the distribution of the remaining $54,000. The mission's recommendations have since been approved by the full overseas committee, and are expected to get the final approval of the JCF board in San Francisco today.

Winston Pickett's article was written for the North California Jewish Bulletin.

JEWISH LEADERS are expressing new optimism about the United Nations following an unprecedented meeting with Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar two weeks ago. One by-product of the conference is a new impetus to neutralize the UN's most notorious resolution, No. 3379: "Zionism is racism." Jewish leaders have now designated 1988 as the target year to overturn the resolution.

B'nai B'rith president Seymour Reich led the delegation, organized under the auspices of the UN Committee of the Presidents' Conference.

"The most important aspect of the meeting was the very fact that it was held," Reich said. Jewish leaders encountered no official reluctance in arranging the meeting, despite their ongoing vocal campaign against many UN practices and policies. Moreover, Perez de Cuellar's attitude "reflected a man who seemed deeply concerned" about Jewish issues, reports Reich.

High priority in the discussion was given to the question of unlocking 40,000 files in the UN's war crimes archive, now residing in a New York warehouse. These inaccessible files were the first to confirm that Kurt Waldheim was directly involved in genocidal activities.

Reich told the secretary that the Klaus Barbie trial was only the most recent illustration that war criminals should not go unpunished, adding that the Jewish community thinks that Perez de Cuellar personally has the power to make the files accessible.

SIXTY PER CENT of Jewish children in Argentina attend day schools where the syllabus is split equally between Jewish studies and general studies - about 20 hours a week each.

Even more astounding is the fact that 70 per cent of the 22,000 day-school pupils come from secular homes.

Paradoxically, Dr. Chaim Barliko, who heads the school system of the Argentinian Jewish community, attributes these unusual figures to the absence of a strong religious establishment in the country.

As a result, he explains, an alternative means of developing a feeling of Jewish identity is needed. Parents who want their children to stick with the Jewish community know that a Jewish day school is the best recipe.

After interviewing Barliko, I discovered a review by Geoffrey Wigoder of Haim Avni's Emanzipazio Vekinnuch Yehudi (Emanzipation and Jewish Education), which traces a century of Jewish education in Argentina as a problem of emancipation.

The book mentions some external influences that were at work. When Peron in the 1950s restricted religious teaching in the state schools, the Catholic Church founded a network of private schools, and some Jewish groups followed that example.

Then, under the rule of the officers, when Catholic studies were made compulsory even for non-Catholics under the guise of "civics," the Jews expanded their private school system.

Barliko was in Jerusalem last

Teaching Zionism 'naturally'

week for a symposium on the annual European Seminar for Jewish studies teachers and principals organized by the World Zionist Organization's Department of Education and Culture in the Diaspora.

During the symposium, Dr. A. Elkrony, head of the department's pedagogical secretariat and director of Kiryat Hatutot (near Armon Hanatziv), stressed the importance of having in every Jewish school in the Diaspora a person - the principal or one of the teachers - responsible for "the Israel angle." If the school board or the big contributors in the community are not Israel-oriented, the principal and staff are often afraid to give Israel much prominence, he said.

Barliko had earlier spoken out against teachers making "propaganda" for Israel or Zionism, and at our interview he elaborated: Elkrony's observation does not apply to the Argentinian community leaders, he said. But propaganda about the evils of the Diaspora or the importance of aliyah is unnecessary. Zionism follows automatically from the proper teaching of Jewish texts.

He took out a soft-cover copy of Deuteronomy in Hebrew that presents the full text but highlights certain poetic passages and emphasizes the repetition of a word or phrase.

Barliko turned to chapter 8 in Ekev (the portion read last Shabbat), verses 7-9, which goes as follows:

"For the Lord thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a land of

In each case, the italicized words not only start a new line, but appear in blue (with the rest of the text in black).

"When you serve food day after day, there's no need to make speeches about it too," Barliko says. "Teaching Bialik's 'El Hatzipor' or a poem by Yehuda Amichai on Jerusalem accomplishes more for Zionism than 20 posters or 20 speeches by prominent Israelis."

"We teach 'natural Zionism' via Israel geography and Hebrew literature. We sing Israeli songs at birthdays and Jewish holidays. And on Independence Day 50,000 of us gather at Luna Park and sing Israeli songs there."

Barliko is also a lecturer in philosophy at the University of Buenos Aires, and has been a visiting lecturer in Jewish Education at the Hebrew University and Tel Aviv University. His book on Maimonides' Guide to the Perplexed was awarded first prize in the essay category by the (general, not Jewish) writers' association. And poems of his have appeared in Ha'aretz and Ma'ariv.

THERE ARE PROBLEMS, of course, including the rapid turnover in teachers, due in large measure to the poor pay. Even though salaries are 30 per cent higher than those of teachers in state schools, they are still low. Consequently, most of the teachers (80 per cent of whom are women) stay in schools only three to five years, while they prepare for other professions.

Another problem is communication between the pupils and their parents on Jewish subjects. The pupil studies the Bible (with its inherent Zionism), but in most cases, his home environment is devoid of Judaism.

"We've begun to work on a programme of adult education so that children can talk to their parents about Yiddishkeit," Barliko says. He shows me an attractive, oversized, soft-cover book he has prepared on the first seven chapters of Genesis, designed for adults.

Entitled El significado de la creacion, it gives a Spanish translation of the text, accompanied by the author's commentary and thought-provoking questions, as well as a liberal sprinkling of quotations (which appear in blue "boxes") from Goethe, Martin Buber, J.D. Salinger, Erich Fromm, Philo and many others.

Four additional titles in the same format have been published, among them a Pessah Haggada, and a book on racism and Judaism. A history of Zionism is in preparation.

Barliko was lavish in his praise of the Education and Culture Department, headed by Dr. Eli Tavin, for its support, and particularly for its in-service courses in Israel for his teachers.

The department also arranges for lectures by Israeli academics and writers in Argentinian teacher-training schools and, to a lesser extent, in secondary schools. Among these have been Yizhar Smilansky, Moshe Shenberg, Amos Oz, Zvi Adar, Shomo Haranati, Dov Sadan, Dov Noy, and Seymour Fox.

THE RAILROAD and bus commuters who study The New York Times every morning on their way to work in the metropolis and those who pore over its packed pages as they gulp down the morning cup of coffee raised their eyebrows quizzically on Friday morning, June 12.

They stared at a full page advertisement inserted by the Hebrew National Food Company denouncing Schulem Rubin for a fine of $39,800 imposed on the company by the New York State Agriculture and Markets Department.

Rabbi Schulem Rubin is the chief enforcement officer of the department's kosher law enforcement bureau. He is also the spiritual leader of a prominent synagogue, Young Israel of Pelham Parkway, and chairman of the Council of Rabbis of the National Council of Young Israel.

The ad appeared in other newspapers. Headlined, "Shame on you, Schulem Rubin," the ad informed the public that Hebrew National was going to the State Supreme Court to halt the collection of the fine pending a full review.

Non-Jewish readers must have been bewildered by this public display of a Jewish company dealing with kosher food attacking a rabbi entrusted by the state to protect the Jewish consumer from fraud. Jewish readers were embarrassed. Very few had ever heard of New York State's kosher law enforcement bureau. Only the learned Jew is conversant with the fine points of kashrut that have been raised. The New York

'Shame on you, Schulem Rubin'

New York Letter
Louis Bernstein

Times was not the most desirable venue for a dispute of this kind.

THE STATE BUREAU of kosher law enforcement was established to protect kosher consumers from fraud. A hundred years ago, with the influx of East European immigrants, there were an estimated 4,000 butchers in New York. Fraud and dishonesty were rampant. The diverse and divided immigrant community could not police itself then any more than one sophisticated observant community can today. Money corrupts, at all times.

H. Pereira Mendes, the long-time rabbi of the historic Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, in 1915 persuaded the state legislature in Albany to pass a law making kashrut fraud illegal. But effective enforcement commenced only in 1935 after the passage of the Shanker-Steingut bill in 1934. This provided funding for inspectors and empowered them to enter kosher establishments to determine whether they were adhering to the laws of kashrut. The department now makes about 21,000 inspections annually.

Two inspectors entered the Hebrew National plant in Queens on June 19, 1985, and found 100 pieces of meat soaking in four stainless steel tanks. The meat was soaking in hot water, which caused the inspector to immediately withdraw his hand; and had not been previously koshered. Both inspectors are observant Jews and former butchers.

The ad in the Times pointed out that the report stated "out of compliance" but originally had said "in compliance." This phrase had been crossed out. The ad, however, conveniently omitted the specifics of the charges attached to the same report. The president of the company announced that the firm was going to court to overturn the fine. He pointed out that there was a two-year gap between the inspection and the imposition of the fine. (The company has since moved to Indianapolis after being involved in a labour dispute in New York.)

The state's agriculture department has come down squarely behind its enforcement bureau. It attributed the unusual delay to bureaucratic snafu and explained that the inspection form marked "in compliance" was an error and did not reflect the charges detailed in the accompanying written report. Hence, the correction of the phrase.

RABBI TIBOR STERN, of Miami Beach, Florida, and chief kashrut supervisor of the Queens plant, strongly defended the company at a press conference. He claimed that the warm water had flowed into the tub accidentally for a minute or two and argued that water heated from the outside did not, halachically, render the meat unfit for koshering.

A source in the Agriculture Department's legal authority said the inspectors had found the mesuglah asleep and that he had told them that he had turned the water off two hours before. Yet the inspectors found it still too hot to immerse their hands in.

Rabbi Stern conveyed a beit din of the Agudas Harabonim which declared that Rabbi Stern was correct in his ruling. The executive director of the rabbinical group later backed away from the ruling which Hebrew National has publicized extensively. It explained that its ruling was general and not for the specific Hebrew National problem. Even the Jewish Press, for whom the Agudas Harabonim is usually sacrosanct, was sharply critical of the halachic ruling. Harold Jacobs, president of the National Council of Young Israel, was critical of the entire procedure of a beit din that did not summon both parties to an issue.

The Agriculture Department's Kosher Advisory Board, consisting of Orthodox rabbis and communal leaders, supported the charges and rallied to Rubin's defence. Orthodox spokesmen in the area of kashrut such as Rabbi Emanuel Holzer, chairman of the Rabbinical Council of America's kashrut commission, wrote the commissioner and made public statements supporting Rubin. Rabbi Stern continues to press his point but so far has attracted little, if any, noticeable support.

HOWEVER, it is the gravamen of the suit instituted by Hebrew National that contains serious and significant consequences for New York's Jewish community. In essence, Hebrew National contends that kashrut is a religious matter and as such is beyond the jurisdiction of state law. The state will respond that the issue is fraud. Hebrew National is a powerful company with $80 million in annual sales. For its own reasons, it has decided to fight hard to protect its name rather than let the issue fade from the memory of a fickle and forgetful public. It has vast resources and has carried out a vigorous public relations campaign. Thoughtful Jews who care about such matters are alarmed. If the challenge to the existing law is successful, fraud will soon fill the vacuum.

Charlatans move quickly. If successful in its suit, Hebrew National will have demonstrated the ability of a large corporation to produce and impose kashrut observance standards that may be just a lot of baloney.

First Zionist Congress in Basel." He promised, however, to stop their distribution. The "Protocols" have been on sale in Brazil since February of this year after several years' absence in the country. Several publications in Sao Paulo asked interested persons to send 94 Cruzados (P.O. Box 3331 in Sao Paulo).

In 1984, the Iranian Embassy in London marked the fifth anniversary of the overthrow of the Shah by printing a summary of the "Protocols" in an English magazine, Iman, in which the Iranians described Zionism as "an enemy of humanity" and said that the "Protocols" were "being adhered to word by word by the Jewish-influenced Western governments." Dutch family roots: Dutch Jews eager to trace their family roots have welcomed the establishment in Amsterdam of a Dutch Society for Jewish Genealogy. Over 150 persons visited its office here on its first day of operation this month after reading a short notice about it in the press, and indicated their willingness to become members.

Holocaust and Hiroshima: Rabbi Joseph Glaser, executive vice-president of the (Reform) Central Conference of American Rabbis, said in Hiroshima this month that the survivors of the atomic bomb dropped there 42 years ago are "both distinct from and connected to" the survivors of the Nazi Holocaust.

"In the case of the Jews, it was a calculated, cold-blooded plan to murder an entire people," he explained in an interview. "In the case of the Japanese, the bombings were a cruel act of war." However, he added, "the survivors of both events are linked by the fact that they have suffered and have a responsibility to tell their story to humanity to insure that neither will ever happen again." The Jewish world would be a very different place were we to put aside our obsession with survivalism, were we to worry less about whether we'll manage to survive as Jews and more about how we are going to live as Jews. It would be a world where we could be less concerned about what Gentiles think of us, and more concerned about what Jews think of Judaism. It would be a world where we would be less bothered by some crackpot's denial of the Holocaust, and more troubled by Jewish ignorance and the destruction of the Second Temple. Steven M. Brazil protests to Iran on "Protocols": Brazil has protested to Iran for publishing and distributing a Portuguese translation of the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion." The Iranian charge d'affaires in Brasilia, Moushumi Entiaz, was called to the Brazilian Foreign Ministry, where he was harshly admonished. He was told that the "Protocols" are a racist and anti-Semitic falsification forbidden by law in Brazil and that distribution of the book must be stopped.

The Iranian diplomat retorted that the "Protocols" were genuine because they were "adopted by the MALKA WAS A sweet, dark-haired, seemingly intelligent nine-year-old who loved to draw and play with friends. The only problem was that she couldn't read. Despite visits to a psychologist and other professionals, and a remedial reading class, Malka made no real progress as she passed through first, second, third and fourth grade.

Then Malka's parents were told to try the new Pediatric Neuropsychology Assessment Clinic at Shaare Zedek Medical Centre in Jerusalem. The family was interviewed and Malka took a battery of tests to determine just how her brain processed information.

To everyone's relief, an organic reason for her problem - dyslexia - was discovered. "I'm so relieved," said Malka's mother, "just to know what the problem is and that there's something one can do about it."

The neuropsychological assessment clinic - the only one of its kind in Israel - was initiated by Judith Guedalia, a school psychologist who had used neuropsychological theories in her work when she was perplexed by children's learning dysfunctions and behavioural difficulties.

Some time ago, Guedalia used the opportunity of an extended family trip to study the philosophy and methods of some of the leading neuropsychologists in the United States.

Upon her return, she looked for a framework in which to put her skills and theories to practice and she was taken in to the psychology department of Shaare Zedek under the direction of Dr. Moshe Isaac. Also involved in the department were Dr. Zoli Zlotogorski, a clinical psychologist, and Dr. Abraham Steinberg, a pediatric neurologist. An added advantage was the presence of several medical students doing their internship at the hospital who were interested in neuropsychology.

"Neuropsychology," explains Guedalia, "is the study of the relationships between the brain and behaviour. Through it, we are learning more and more about the biochemical functions of the brain."

Society is benefiting from these advancements, she notes, as it has been shown that more mental health patients can be treated by drugs. As a result, there are also fewer referrals to psychiatric hospitals.

Guedalia is quick to point out that there still remains a definite need for psychotherapy, but says there is now a growing reliance on both traditional therapies and drugs to treat behavioural disorders.

"Everyone has some degree of brain damage," Guedalia claims, adding that in only 15 per cent of the population is it severe enough to cause problems or limitations. Usually, the brain is able to make compensations for deficiencies.

In children, whose brain development doesn't reach its prime until the age of 14 or 15, there is still actually a great degree of flexibility and whole areas can take on diverse tasks.

For example, a child of nine months had a non-malignant brain tumour removed from the left temporal lobe, the area of the brain which controls speech development. The same operation conducted on an adult, Guedalia explains, would result in severe speech impediments. In this case, however, the child was saying words at the age of 18 months and by three years had attained the normal verbal level for his age group.

The neuropsychologist cautions, however, that the child might suffer later because the transfer of speech might be at the expense of some other higher brain function, such as spatial organization or reading ability. He will, therefore, need to be kept under observation for a few years.

"Brain-mapping" - learning which areas of the brain control the different physical and emotional functions - was first practised some 40 years ago, Guedalia explains, when researchers were studying the effect of war injuries on specific areas of the brain. Studying the relationship between brain function and behaviour - particularly in cases of poor scholastic achievement, began about 20 years later.

Before then, it was common for children with reading difficulties to be encouraged to "try harder." If the underlying reason for the difficulty was said to be minimal brain dysfunction (MBD), "it was like telling a blind man to try harder to see," says Guedalia, adding that parents often came to clinics believing their child was lazy, uncooperative and unmotivated.

The clinic, which has aroused much interest in the medical community, receives referrals from pediatricians, neurologists, psychologists, psychiatrists, speech therapists, physiotherapists, teachers and parents from all over the country. Its staff has been besieged with invita-

After tests at the clinic to establish an organic reason for a child's poor school performance, there is often a surge of progress due simply to the discovery of a cause and the hope that a solution may be found.

At the clinic, Guedalia and her staff screen, test and analyse data. They hold at least two meetings with the parents and the child, the first before testing and the second to summarize the findings and make recommendations for future treatment.

ALMOST 100 different tests are available at the clinic, many of them new and innovative. In the 18 months since the facility was established, the assessment staff has examined about 200 patients between the ages of one month and 24 years.

The latter patient was a soldier who became the brunt of his platoon's jokes and the despair of his officers because he was always getting lost. At the clinic, the staff discovered that he suffered from a dysfunction concerning spatial orientation. They taught him "tricks" and strategies to help him overcome his problem and he has functioned normally ever since.

The clinic, which has aroused much interest in the medical community, receives referrals from pediatricians, neurologists, psychologists, psychiatrists, speech therapists, physiotherapists, teachers and parents from all over the country. Its staff has been besieged with invitations to give lectures and conduct workshops.

There are several neuropsychology clinics for adults in the country, such as Beit Lowenstein in Ramatana, which specializes in post-trauma head injuries. The Shaare Zedek clinic, however, is the only one which specializes in children and young adults.

The assessment process is costly. Guedalia admits, but the dramatic and meaningful results justify it, she says. The clinic's work is far from routine; great ingenuity is needed to decipher the test results and to suggest to teachers, therapists or doctors ways of overcoming the behavioural dysfunction.

A six-year-old boy with speech difficulties was sent to the clinic after a neurologist, a psychologist and his family physician found no ostensible reason for his problem. The clinic discovered that the child had trouble understanding auditory symbols. The staff's recommendation, in this case, was that a speech therapist be engaged who would introduce a symbolic form of communication based on visual cues to help the child integrate the auditory symbols he couldn't grasp. After half a year of therapy, the child had made tremendous progress in his speech and understanding.

"That's what we're aiming to do," says Guedalia, "to stress each individual child's strong points and learn strategies to overcome the weak ones."

ISRAELI RESEARCHERS who studied Holocaust survivors thought they would find that more suffered from high blood pressure than European immigrants who arrived here before the Nazi era. They were surprised by the results: While the Holocaust survivors did show more emotional stress, they had no more hypertension than the group that had been spared the trauma of the Nazi era.

The research, conducted by Drs. Rafael Carol and Donald Silverberg of the Tel Aviv University School of Medicine and Dr. Alexander Aviram of Tel Aviv's Rokeh Hospital, was reported in the latest issue of the Israel Journal of Medical Sciences.

The blood pressure levels of 1,150 Israelis aged 50 to 80 who had come here from Europe before 1939 were compared with those of 2,159 Jews who survived the Holocaust and arrived here after 1945. Most were examined at Bnai Brak's Machon Mor, a diagnostic institute, in a periodic health check-up financed by their employers.

The researchers say that they don't know how many of the Holocaust survivors had actually been concentration camp inmates. But from other studies, they assume that about 85 per cent were under direct Nazi occupation during the war. Most were born in Poland, Russia, Germany, Austria or France, and thus invariably went through great stress during most of the war.

The lack of a higher percentage of hypertension among the survivors, they suggest, means that they are people with an exceptional ability to cope with stress. They not only survived the nightmares of the Holocaust, but also adjusted to employment and social life in Israel, and most of them were still working four decades after World War II.

Obviously, Holocaust survivors who broke down and were unable to work were not included in this study. Thus the researchers stress that they cannot conclude that all survivors were saved from trauma-induced hypertension. Still, state the researchers, the results "could be taken as evidence of the marked human ability to return and readjust to ordinary community life even after major trauma."

AN INFORMATION centre on poisonous substances will be established at Tel Hashomer, following a decision by a ministerial committee headed by Health Minister Shoshana Arbeli-Almosino. The committee, set up two years ago in the wake of the Bhopal poisoning catastrophe in India, decided that Ya'acov Heichal of the Israel Atomic Energy Commission will head the centre.

Information on poisonous, inflammable and otherwise dangerous substances will be filed there. The centre will also keep tabs on where the substances are stored and how they have been stored, as well as recommend ways to protect the population from them and prevent a mass poisoning incident in Israel.

The centre will operate around the clock, and be funded to the tune of NIS 600,000 for the first year by eight ministries. The health minister said that there have been no fatal poison-gas accidents in recent years, but that she is very worried about its possibility in places like Ramat Hovav near Beersheba.

KUPAT HOLIM MEUHEDET, which recently announced an offer of six months' free membership for new Soviet Jewish olim if a wave of immigration were to arrive, now makes the same offer to newly demobilized soldiers from the regular army. Any recently released soldier can get free health insurance from Meuhedet for six months - to take effect immediately upon registration. Full hospitalization coverage is also included.

together until soft peaks form. Now gradually add 6 tbs. sugar and continue beating until stiff and glossy, and all the sugar has dissolved (test with fingers).
For a 20 cm. pie, change the above number of eggs to two and use only 4 tbs. of sugar.
To prevent shrinking, seal meringue to pie (at room temperature) at edges of pastry. Bake in a medium oven at 350°F-180°C (Mark 4) until peaks of meringue are golden brown.

Meringue Shell
To make a meringue shell, ingredients and methods are the same as for 22½ cm. pie with the exception of the sugar which should be 1 cup.

Prepare the shell by covering a cookie sheet with plain ungreased paper. Using a 22½ cm. plate or round cake dish as a guide, draw a circle on the paper. Spread meringue over circle and shape into shell with back of spoon, making bottom 1 cm. thick and mounding up edges so that sides are 4 cm. high.

Bake in a very slow oven, at 275°F-125°C (Mark 1), for one hour. Turn off heat and leave in closed oven with closed door for at least two hours.

Lemon Meringue Pie
300 gm. (1½ cups) sugar
3 tbs. cornflour
3 tbs. all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. salt
1½ cups hot water
3 eggs, separated
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
30 gm. butter or margarine
½ cup lemon juice
1 tsp. lemon juice
22½ cm. baked pastry shell

Combine sugar, cornflour, flour and salt, then blend in hot water. Bring to the boil over high heat, stirring constantly. Reduce to medium; cook and stir eight minutes more. Remove from heat.

Stir a small amount of hot mixture into slightly beaten egg-yolks (use egg-whites for meringues). Return to hot mixture. Bring to the boil over high heat, stirring constantly. Reduce heat to low, cook and stir five minutes longer. Remove from heat.

Add lemon peel and butter or margarine. Stir in ½ cup lemon juice. Cover entire surface with clear plastic wrap and cool for 10 minutes. Pour into cooled pastry.

Make the meringue as explained above, but for this pie, substitute 1 tsp. lemon juice for the vanilla essence. Spread meringue over the filling, sealing to edges of pastry. Bake at 350°F-180°C (Mark 4) for 12-15 minutes.

Cool pie thoroughly before cutting into wedges. Makes eight servings.

Dough for Single Crust Pie

120 gm. flour, sifted
¼ tsp. salt
1 tbs. sugar
90 gm. butter or margarine
1 egg-yolk
1 tbs. chilled water
1½ tbs. lemon juice or rum

Mix and sift flour, salt and sugar. Cut in the butter or margarine using two knives (useful in hot weather). Beat egg-yolk with water and lemon juice or rum, and work into dough. With cool fingers, pat into pie dish, flattening dough to just over 1 cm. thick.

This dough will fit a 22½ cm. pie dish or 22½ cm. X 30 cm. dish.

Easy Cream Pie with Fruit

Pie Crust
20 whole wheat crackers
1 tbs. brown sugar
60 gm. butter or margarine, melted

Roll out crackers. Add sugar and melted fat to cracker crumbs. Pat into bottom of spring-form pan. Bake crust in pre-heated oven at 375°F-200°C (Mark 5) for 8-10 minutes. Cool to room temperature.

Filling
½ cup cream, whipped
1 pkt. vanilla instant pudding
1½ cups milk
Sliced peaches, slightly sweetened

In one bowl, beat the cream until stiff. In a second bowl, prepare the instant pudding according to directions. Fold in the whipped cream.

Transfer to the cooled pie shell and chill thoroughly in the refrigerator. Before serving, cover top with sliced peaches and cut pie into eight wedges.

Note: If fresh peaches are unavailable, drained canned peaches can be used without extra sweetening.

Frozen Maple Mousse
2 eggs, separated
½ cup maple syrup
1 cup cream
½ tsp. cream of tartar

Heat syrup over a low heat until tiny bubbles appear around the edges of syrup. Place yolks on the top of a double saucepan and beat them vigorously. While beating hard, slowly add the heated syrup.

Place over simmering water and cook; continue to beat with rotary or electric beater until the mixture, coats a wooden spoon, about 8-10 minutes. Cool completely, meanwhile beating egg-whites with cream of tartar until stiff peaks are formed. Beat cream until stiff; fold egg-whites and cream gently into cold maple mixture and blend well. Makes six servings.

PAN-AM GAMES

U.S. long jumpers hog the show

INDIANAPOLIS (Reuters). — Carl Lewis and Jackie Joyner-Kersey head for Europe this week, having used the Pan American games to set the scene for potentially explosive long jump performances at the World Championships.

The U.S. pair leaped to gold with world class performances during an otherwise mediocre six days of athletics action.

The duo will expect tougher competition when the World Championships begin in Rome in less than two weeks. Lewis will face Soviet Robert Emmiyan, first in the world this year, and Joyner-Kersey will meet graceful East German Heike Drechsler.

Joyner-Kersey provided the surprise and highlight of an athletics programme lacking talent, atmosphere and excitement, when she jumped 7.45m, to equal Drechsler's world record.

Lewis, having arrived in Indianapolis suggesting he would fly beyond Bob Beamon's legendary 1968 world mark of 8.90m., did his best in testing conditions to fulfil the promise.

His winning leap of 8.75m., just four cms. down on his personal best set here four years ago, was the sixth longest legal effort in history and the fifth best ever outdoors.

His series also included two wind-aided 8.68m. jumps which took their place in history's top 20.

"I was pleased with my jumping in these conditions," said Lewis. "I came here to win a gold medal, and I'm happy to have jumped consistently. When the perfect day comes, I'll be ready."

Emmiyan leaped 8.86m. at altitude in May to record the longest jump in the world since Beamon's extraordinary effort at the 1968 Olympics.

But the Russian is thought unlikely to trouble Lewis in competition, where the Olympic and world champion's consistency speaks volumes. Behind Beamon an Emmiyan, Lewis has produced the next 19 best jumps ever recorded and 41 of 59 jumps over 8.53m.

Lewis's win was his 51st in succession since February, 1981.

Joyner-Kersey, better known as the heptathlon Olympic silver medalist and world record holder, will need another inspirational performance in Rome if she is to take the title from Drechsler.

HE FLIES THROUGH THE AIR. — Carl Lewis sets a new Pan Am long jump record of 8.75 m. (APF)

She entered Thursday's final with a best this year of only 7.12m. and a personal best of 7.24m., but she improved her personal best by one cm. with a third-round 7.25m. and then bounded a remarkable 0.20m. further than ever before on her last attempt to equal the mark Drechsler set and equalled within 12 days last year.

In Cologne, big Ben Johnson, who on Sunday equalled his own fastest time ever for the 100m. at sea level, was sore but fit after crashing into an errant photographer at the end of his race.

The 21-year-old had just finished in 9.95 sec., equaling the time he set in Moscow last year, when he ran full tilt into a London photographer who had illegally positioned himself on the track.

"I thought 10 years work was in ruins," said Johnson's coach, Charlie Francis, as he saw his protégé receive medical assistance on the track.

Heat treatment on Johnson's bruised back and shoulder put him right for Wednesday's Grand Prix meeting in Zurich when he should run against Olympic champion Carl Lewis.

Ohana bags 4

Post Sports Staff
Eli Ohana, who has been in Belgium for just over a month now, starred for his new club Malines in a friendly match against fourth division Eendracht. Ohana scored four out of his club's five goals, Malines winning 5-0.

Ohana seems to have recovered completely from a knee injury which kept him out of training for two weeks, and Malines' Dutch coach Ed de Moes said after the match that he is very pleased with Ohana's form and ability.

Despite playing for only an hour out of the 90 minutes, the 22-year-old Israeli was very impressive in his first serious appearance for his new club. He was taken off so as not to aggravate his injury.

Tomorrow Malines play their opening league match of the season against Cercle Brugge, the team that beat Beveren, Moshe Sinai's club, 4-0, in the Flemish Cup on Saturday.

Second best for Gilad

By JACK LEON

TEL AVIV. — Israel's doubles expert Gilad Bloom threw off the effects of a serious ear infection contracted in New Delhi, to finish as runner-up at New Haven, Connecticut, with his American partner Brad Pearce. In yesterday's final of the $25,000 Pilot Pen Tennis Open, the No. 1 seeds went down 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 to Canadian Davis Cup racket Glenn Michibata and American Glenn Layendecker.

The 23-year-old Bloom, who collected in Connecticut his first title in 1983, was the world doubles number one at the end of 1986 in the standings in this category.

Continuing on the Challenger Series circuit, Bloom has now moved to Wichita, near Chicago and is a leading contender in the singles draw, which gets under way today.

Top Israeli juniors Boaz Merendino and Raviv Weidenfeld were beaten in the first round of the singles qualifying tournament at Westminster.

Mandelstam has meanwhile recovered from the stomach ailment which forced him to withdraw from the Canadian Championships, and will be back in action in his $375,000 Cincinnati tournament — the last major prior to the start of the U.S. Open in September 1.

The star-studded main draw at Cincinnati, comprising 64 players, also begins today.

Dud Cards can't win anymore

NEW YORK (AP). — The St. Louis Cardinals, who appeared ready a month ago to run away with the National League East, are keeping things interesting — particularly for the Philadelphia Phillies.

"We just aren't hitting," Cardinal manager Whitey Herzog said on Sunday after the Cards lost to Philadelphia 4-3, their third loss to the Phillies in the four-game series.

That left the team that led the division by 9.5 games on July 23rd with just a four-game lead over the Montreal Expos with the defending champions New York Mets 4.5 back. And even Philadelphia, now nine games behind, are beginning to get pennant visions.

"I think we're still in this thing," said Juan Samuel, whose two-run single in the seventh put the Phillies ahead to stay.

The Expos, meanwhile, were rallying to beat Pittsburgh 16-7 as Tim Lincecum hit for the cycle and the Mets set a team record with 23 runs in a 23-10 victory over Chicago at Wrigley Field.

In the National League West race, San Francisco and Cincinnati remained tied. The Reds shut out San Diego 2-0 and the Giants beat Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0. Third place Houston beat Atlanta 6-2.

The Cardinals took a 2-1 lead into the seventh inning behind John Tudor, who had allowed just two hits.

Nick Eschey hit solo homers for the only Cincinnati runs and Bo Robinson and John Franco combined on a three-batter at San Diego Robinson, a former reliever, went seven innings and had a career-high eight strikeouts.

Billy Hatcher drove in a career-high four runs with a double and a single, and Jim Dandrea went in his first appearance since being activated after being on the disabled list because of tendinitis in his left shoulder. The victory kept Houston just three games back of the Giants and Reds.

Dandrea, 30-4, went six innings, giving up two runs on six hits, while striking out two and walking two.

It was also the first loss after five straight wins for the Cardinals, 18-7.

The Expos gave manager Buck Rodgers a 49th birthday present by rallying from a 7-4 deficit with six runs in their final two at-bats. It gave the Expos a four-game sweep of their series with the visiting Pirates.

The Mets, who blew a 5-0 lead to Chicago on Friday and 1-0 and 2-0 leads the next two days, broke a five-game losing streak against the Cubs. Strawberry, who had the biggest role, almost didn't play because of a sore hip. But he said "No way!" when manager Davey Johnson asked him if he wanted the day off.

Strawberry's biggest blow was his 29th homer, tying a career high. That gave the Mets a 7-0 lead in the fourth, after the Cubs scored five in the fourth off Ron Darling, 10-7. The Mets came back with 10 in the next two innings off Drew Hall.

Mike Leons allowed just three over his 10 innings to improve his record to 11-7.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Lloyd Moseby and Alan Trammell came through in the clutch. Gary Ward and Don Mattingly did not.

The results left the Toronto Blue Jays and Detroit Tigers close in the American League East and the New York Yankees frustrated.

Moseby broke a seventh inning tie with a two-out, two-run homer when the Blue Jays beat Chicago 6-4. That left Toronto one half game ahead of Detroit, who beat Kansas City 10-6 when Trammell's double drove in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning.

New York fell three games off the pace by losing to Cleveland 1-0. The Yankees blew their biggest chance in the eighth inning when they loaded the bases with one out before Indians reliever Doug Jones struck out Ward and retired Mattingly on a fly ball to left.

Jones' fifth save sent New York to their 11th loss in 15 games.

"We just can't seem to put it all together," said New York's Ron Guidry, who took the loss, despite allowing only an unearned run in eight innings.

Toronto and New York begin West Coast trips tonight while Detroit returns home to open a series against American League West leaders Minnesota.

Moseby drove in three runs with three hits, including a two-run homer in the seventh that broke a 4-4 tie and led Toronto over Chicago.

Moseby's 20th homer came with two outs against Ray Seagar. Toronto's George Bell hit a run-scoring single in the third and became the first AL player with 100 RBI.

Lou Whitaker hit three doubles. Jim Morrison homered and drove in three runs and Trammell's RBI double broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning as Detroit won in Kansas City.

Jeff Robinson, 5-5, got the victory as Detroit won for the fifth time in six games. He relieved starter Frank Tanana, who remained 10-11 in his career at Royals stadium and is 7-20 against Kansas City.

Jose Canesio hit his 25th home run and two doubles, leading Oakland over California.

Greg Cadaret, 2-0, got the victory and Dennis Eckersley got his ninth save.

Rookie John Marzano hit a pair of two-run homers and doubled, and Ellis Burks and Spike Owen also hit two-run homers as Boston shelled Texas.

Bob Stanley, 4-12, ended his fifth game losing streak with his first victory since June 8. He gave up nine hits in his third complete game. Greg Harris, 5-9, took the loss.

Arrogant Edmonds

LONDON (Reuters). — Test cricketer Phil Edmonds faces disciplinary action over a newspaper article in which he said he should be captain of England and Middlesex in place of Mike Gatting.

Edmonds was last week ordered to appear before the Test and County Cricket Board (TCCB) disciplinary committee on September 7 to answer charges. "In relation to public pronouncements."

The action follows an article in a popular daily newspaper in which Edmonds said: "I think the guys who didn't make me skipper are crazy."

Edmonds, who played in all five tests in this year's series which England lost to Pakistan, blamed his failure to be appointed captain on his poor relationship with former England and Middlesex skipper Mike Brearley.

"I'm arrogant enough to think that I should have taken over the captaincy of Middlesex when Brearley finished. And a natural progression of that would have been to become skipper of England," Edmonds wrote. "But when Brearley retired, the powers that be decided I was not the man to take over."

Steffi is No. 1 at last

LOS ANGELES (Reuters). — Second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany beat third-seeded Chris Evert 6-3 6-4 to win the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Los Angeles women's tournament and capture the top spot in the world women's rankings.

The 18-year-old West German, unaware that the number-one ranking was at stake, played a relaxed match.

"My father and I were talking about it before the match, and he said it wasn't impossible," said Graf. "But afterwards he came up to me and said 'You're number one.'"

Graf has won eight tournaments this year, and has overtaken Martina Navratilova, who was beaten by Evert in the semifinals. Her leading margin will be a scant 7/10ths of a percentage point.

Evert, who has lost in straight sets to Graf the last four times they have played, said the West German played the big points like a number-one player should.

"She hardly made any mistakes on the big points. That was the key," Evert said. "She acted her backhand well today. I'm just surprised it took the computer this long to recognize her as number one."

Graf will become only the second player in 14 years to hold the number one ranking besides Navratilova and Evert. American Tracy Austin held the spot in April and July 1980 after pursuing Navratilova for over a year.

"I can't stop smiling. It feels great," Graf said. "This means the most of everything. I know I have the ability, but I didn't think I could do it so soon," Graf said.

In Montreal, Ivan Lendl won the $375,000 Canadian Open for the fourth time yesterday, beating Sweden's Stefan Edberg 6-4 7-6 in a true test of endurance.

Lendl and Edberg, the top seeds in the tournament, played the final just two hours after winning semi-final matches which had been postponed due to rain on Saturday.

Under mostly sunny skies, Lendl disposed of Jimmy Connors 7-5 6-4, while Edberg ousted defending champion Boris Becker 6-3 6-4.

It was the fourth championship this season for Lendl, who earned $51,000.

Lendl said after the match that he had felt "all in the stomach for the last three days" and had considered withdrawing during the first set. If the match had gone to three sets he could not have continued.

"I would not have played a third set. It was not the best and I wasn't tired, I was just feeling sick."

FORMULA 1 RACING

Mansell wins on disaster course

ZELTWEG (Reuters). — As Britain's Nigel Mansell celebrated a notable triumph in his 100th formula one race on Sunday, the organizers of the Austrian Grand Prix reflected on a weekend of almost constant calamity and near disaster.

Swede Stefan Johansson's 240kph crash into a deer during practice, Saturday's torrential rainstorm and Sunday's eventful race, aborted twice because of multiple pileups at the start, aroused little but criticism from the drivers.

The fact that Mansell and Piquet were required to complete an extra lap because of a failure to produce the chequered flag after the scheduled 52-lap distance, and that Mansell received a painful bump on the head during his victory parade in an open car, merely added to the catalogue of confusion.

World champion Alain Prost of France, who admitted his title challenge was all but over after placing sixth, was scathing in his criticism of safety work left undone at the bumpy circuit where the cars lap at speeds averaging more than 200kph.

In-form Awaskar lifts Ashdod to impressive cricket victory

ASHDOD. — Ashdod A scored a handsome 146-run win over their town rivals Modern to capture the Israel Cricket Association's inaugural "Knock-out" Cup sponsored by Rajah Videos.

Ashdod's all-purpose skipper Hillel Awaskar was the hero of their triumph. He hammered a splendid 90 in only 85 minutes including five lousy sixes and ten fours. His crackling knock was part of a 152 3rd-wicket stand with St. Eval Nebet (65) which settled the issue effectively. Ashdod completed 267 in their 50 overs, the final wicket going down off the very last ball.

M. Walwadkar (4-64) and Shimshon Raj (3-52) were Modern's most successful bowlers.

Walwadkar with 35 was the only Modern batsman to cope with the tight Ashdod A bowling and they were bundled out for a paltry 121.

Awaskar completed a fine day taking 3-28 with his left-arm spinners. In the latest league matches there were wins for both Jerusalem's Hebrew University and Tzfat Ramat.

SCORES: Hebrew University beat Kiryat Beitik by six wickets. Kiryat Beitik 116 all out (D. Silver 39, E. Worrall 15-5-36-6; BU 117-4 (A. Moss 43, S. Perlman 36).

Young Ramat beat Dikma by 65 runs. Young Ramat 213 all out (F. Solomon 111; Dikma 146 all out (Y. Oscar 48, D. Binyamin 7-42).

Underwood retires

LONDON (AFP). — Former England live spinner Derek Underwood announced his retirement from first-class cricket in Thursday.

The 42-year-old Kent slow left-arm, who played 85 tests between 1966 and 1982, is to go into business.

"I'm very sad to be retiring but I've decided to call it a day," he said. Underwood, who received the MBE in 1981, made his debut in 1963 at the age of 17 and became the youngest player to take 100 wickets in his first season.

Israel due to get its first hotel school

By GREER FAY CASHMAN
Israelis seeking a degree in hotel management will no longer have to embark on courses at Cornell University in the U.S. or the Hotel Training School in Lausanne. A hotel school is to be established at Tel Aviv University at the initiative of Dieter Geishardt, general manager of the Tel Aviv Sheraton Hotel.

Geishardt has been lobbying for over a year for the creation of such a project, and has finally got past first base. He is chairman of the Israel Hotel Academy Foundation which was founded specifically to promote the academization of hotel and tourism management. "The Tadmor school does not offer academic degrees."

The foundation has been officially registered, and it is governed by an eight-member management committee. Deputy chairmen include Raphael Farber, director general of the Ministry of Tourism; Avi Federman, general manager of the Dan Hotel chain; Dr. Moshe Medal, deputy director of the Sheba Medical Center; attorney Moriel Matatov; and Herzl Shalem, chairman of the Association for the Promotion of Tourism in Israel.

Before selecting Tel Aviv University as the campus for the Hotel School, the foundation had discussions with representatives of two other institutions of higher learning, Ben-Gurion University and the Technion.

Tel Aviv was chosen in the end because it did not insist on the construction of a new building. The hotel school will be an adjunct to the School for Business Administration. Of greater significance, said Geishardt, was the fact that the university is located in the city which is most representative of international tourism trade.

Another important factor is that Tel Aviv is in the centre of the country, and will have an easier time attracting guest lecturers here for three or four years than would Beer-Sheva or Haifa, Geishardt said.

The estimated annual operating budget for the school will be between $2.5 million to $3m. Getting the school off the ground will cost around $350,000. The foundation had hoped to begin the first academic year in October 1988, but Geishardt said he was doubtful that the funds will be in hand by that time. A more realistic opening date, he said, was October 1989. The courses of study at the hotel school will combine theoretical seminars with practical work.

Geishardt emphasized the importance of grooming Israeli hotel executives for top management positions. The new Sheraton policy, he told The Jerusalem Post is to appoint local personnel as general managers. Dr. Salutski, the recently appointed, Finnish-born resident manager of the Sheraton "is being developed" to take over from Geishardt when his period of tenure in Israel expires, he said. A Cornell graduate, Salutski has lived in Israel for six years, and previously managed the Jordan River Hotel in Tiberias.

Other international hotel management chains here with imported general managers include Hilton, Hyatt and Intercontinental.

Funding for the hotel school will come largely from the public, and fund-raising committees have been appointed for this purpose. One will be operating in Israel and the other in Europe.

BANKING ON IT / Pinhas Landau

On your screen soon

Electronic banking in Israel from the office or home is moving steadily closer to reality. That is the official word from the Bank of Israel, and it represents an achievement primarily for Israel Discount Bank, which has attached most weight to this topic.

What does it mean for us, the consumers? The truth is that it won't affect most bank customers, because in practice we probably won't use the service. In fact, it will probably only be available to large business customers, at least in the early stages. But given the speed with which branch banking is going electronic, it would be wrong to assume that households and other small customers will not switch over to home banking for several years. Discount's Menachem Guterman, Israel's leading authority in this field, believes the key factor in the development of home banking will be the availability of broad data-bases for customers to hook into, of which bank information will be only one aspect.

A parallel development is much more likely to show up in neighbourhoods over the next six-to-12 months - "automated branches."

An automated branch is basically a place where people carry out their banking transactions via machines, without the intermediation of human beings. In the extreme version, the branch would have no people staffing it at all, while a moderate version would allow perhaps one or two personnel to assist.

account balances and portfolio values. Discount's machines are now equipped to give:

• A business client a complete list of all the deferred cheques due to be credited to his account, including amounts, dates and other details, so that he has full knowledge of his cash flow.

• A breakdown of a customer's investment portfolio, including all its different components, according to kind of linkage (index-, dollar and unlinked) and category of investment (shares, bonds, mutual funds, savings schemes, foreign currency, etc.) and

• An updated balance of a client's mortgage - if this is with Discount's mortgage subsidiary, Development Mortgage Corp.

All this is very smart, the only drawback being that it can only cover accounts in the Discount group, so that people who bank in more than one group receive only partial information. Nor is that all because, in terms of the transactions that Discount's Mashov machines permit, the range is wider than elsewhere. It includes not only transfers from current accounts to fixed-time deposits and the deposit and withdrawal of funds in pachak (the successor to tapes) accounts, but even the ability to sell foreign currency from a patam or patash account into a shekel current account.

To the inevitable question from new immigrants and other holders of free foreign currency accounts, can one give an order via the machine to buy foreign currency into one's account by debiting one's shekel account? The answer is no. Since July 1985 Israelis have been barred from purchasing foreign currency against shekels unless it is put on deposit for a year, and therefore the buying option is effectively closed to most customers. Services that are not available to everyone are too complicated to offer, says Guterman.

Another unique electronic service that Discount offers is the ability to place purchase and redemption orders for units in the Hanot mutual fund group now managed by the bank's sister company, Discount Investment Corp. In addition to all this, the satellites all contain a phone link to the Telexbank service which allows customers to orally transmit orders regarding their accounts, after identifying themselves with a personal identification number (PIN).

Discount, in its satellites, and Leumi both in its branches and through its external information dispensers, now provide customer notifications by electronic mail. These include statements, charges and other items, with Discount promising that even securities' buying and selling notes will be available on electronic mail soon.

All the banks now allow customers to obtain the statement covering their credit card purchases, from the third of each month, the day after their accounts are debited. The statements provide full details of purchases made, whether they were on credit or not, and how much was debited that month.

Hapoalim offers an additional service which lists the Isracard bills that have been entered since the last debit date. This is of use to those who want to know how much they are going to be debited on the coming second of the month, but can still be misleading since not all businesses process their bills efficiently. With the spread of electronic billing from the point of (Epos) sale this service will gain in value.

All these services already exist via machines, whether inside or outside bank premises. The automated branch will merely "institutionalize" them, as it were, by making service by machine the norm instead of a parallel or alternative to service by people. Most branches will, of course, remain "regular," since anything involving counselling, decisions or co-ordination is still far beyond the scope of silicon chips. Given the alacrity with which the Israeli public adapted to previous generations of electronic banking services, it may be assumed that this coming one will be swiftly absorbed as well.

But the advent of the automated branch begs an obvious question: If there is no one to talk to but the computer, why can't we avoid going to the branch altogether? Why don't we just get our computer to talk to the bank's computer, and do the whole thing from our home or business? That is exactly the driving force behind home and office banking, where an important breakthrough is at last scheduled to take place in this country. This will be the subject of next week's column.

The advent of the automated branch begs an obvious question: If there is no one to talk to but the computer, why can't we avoid the branch altogether? Why don't we just get our computer to talk to the bank's computer?

The Bank of Israel intends to clear the way for introduction of automated branches in the relatively near future. The regulators are keen on plugging banking-by-machine because it ties in with the three-year programme of staff reductions that they are currently "persuading" the banks to adopt.

This idea is not so far-fetched if you consider that the banks are already providing a large number of automated services. In the cases of banks Hapoalim, Leumi and Mizrahi these are available primarily from machines situated outside the branch premises. Originally, there was the cash dispenser which - as the name implies - simply dished out funds to the needy. Soon, though, the cash dispenser was pushed out by the automated teller machine (ATM). This could accept deposits in envelopes, of cheques and sometimes of cash too, as well as other instructions, such as ordering cheque books and paying bills. But the ATM itself could not register these transactions in the client's account.

The next stage was to link the individual ATM to the operating bank's main computer. This allowed access to updated balances, while Hapoalim expanded its machines' ability to include deposits and withdrawals from tapes and pekam short-term accounts.

This led to Leumi's automated information service. Essentially this gave access from the bank's exterior wall to the main areas of activity of most customers - securities, foreign currency, savings schemes and so forth, as well as unlinked shekel deposits. Balances and evaluations could be obtained at any convenient time of any day. After Leumi pioneered this idea last year, Hapoalim and Mizrahi followed suit. Hapoalim is engaged in expanding its network of information dispensers as rapidly as possible, with 60 already operating, and another 20 due shortly.

All this time, Discount had been developing its own, quite different, system. It introduced into Israel the "satellite" branch, which was basically an ante-chamber of an existing branch, open for many more hours (usually 12 a day), and equipped with machines able to do more than the other banks' wall units outside their branches. In addition to dispensing cash and information on 'End most tax deductions'

TEL AVIV. — Continuing the Lavi jet fighter programme will impose an unbearably heavy tax burden on the country and reduce the motivation to work, Eldad Bukspan, president of the Association of Organizations for the Self-Employed (Lahav), said yesterday, unveiling a sweeping plan to reduce the number of tax deductions.

Bukspan warned that it would be folly to raise taxes to finance the controversial jet, whose fate remains undecided for at least another week, after the cabinet on Sunday voted to delay a decision.

Uzi Steinberg, chairman of Lahav's tax committee, said that by doing away with virtually all deductions now incorporated into the tax code, the government could cut the average tax bill 20 per cent and still raise the same revenue. He compared the proposal to the tax reform initiated by the Reagan administration, where rates were reduced on the assumption that it would improve productivity, thus widening the tax base.

The Lahav plan would tax the self-employed at the same rate as salaried workers, but would retain deductions for the physically disabled and others clearly in need.

Steinberg told a press conference that independent businessmen, such as lawyers, barbers and shopkeepers, pay on average 10 to 15 per cent more in taxes than their salaried counterparts at the same income levels.

The Lahav proposals will be presented to a committee set up several weeks ago by Finance Minister Moshe Nissim to explore new areas for tax reform, in the wake of the watered-down changes approved by the Knesset earlier this year. The panel, headed by Prof. Eytan Shekshinski, of Tel Aviv University, is due to present its proposals in October.

and has invited public comment and suggestions.

Bukspan said the test of the committee's success would be determined by its ability to grant fully the rights coming to the self-employed in Israel after years of discrimination and neglect.

Independent businessmen have been pressing to have their relative tax burden reduced for some time, but because they are in business for themselves they have a far easier time than salaried workers in hiding their full taxable income. This advantage is widely assumed to be the reason why marginal rates for the self-employed are higher.

Steinberg said the government should not regard the current tax brackets as holy and should consider reducing the gap between the highest and lowest marginal rates as a means of boosting productivity and investment.

Matityahu Drobles (David Rubinger)

Drobles: 'No more Bank Leumi fiascos'

By CHARLES HOFFMAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The newly appointed governor of the parent company of Bank Leumi, World Zionist Organization Settlement Department Chairman Matityahu Drobles, vowed that he "would not let myself get into a situation where I have to say that I didn't know or that I didn't hear" about critical bank matters.

Speaking in an interview yesterday, Drobles was alluding to the claim made earlier this year by his predecessor, WZO Chairman Arye Dabiz, after it was revealed that the ex-chairman of Bank Leumi, Ernest Japhet, was awarded a $5 million retirement package. Dabiz resigned as governor over the Japhet affair.

Drobles was recently appointed as governor of the Jewish Colonial Trust (JCT), the parent company of Bank Leumi. The JCT was established some 80 years ago as the financial arm of the Zionist movement, and is today controlled by the WZO. Avraham Agmon, director of Delek Fuel Corp., was named governor along with Drobles.

Drobles is head of the Herut faction in the WZO and Agmon is identified with the Labour Party.

Drobles said he intended to propose that the JCT appoint an external comptroller and legal counsel to supervise the bank's affairs, which would enable the governors and the JCT to be kept informed of current Leumi affairs.

Asked if the WZO involvement in the bank, through the JCT, was not anachronistic, Drobles replied that it was important to provide public supervision for the bank "so that it serves Zionist purposes. We can't just sell it to anyone."

He added that if a responsible public body was prepared to assume control of the bank, then the JCT would consider transferring its voting shares in the bank to this body. But in return, he said, the WZO would expect to be paid a "dividend" that would help support its educational and political work among Diaspora Jewry.

Middle East tension bolsters the dollar

LONDON (Reuters). — Concern about the situation in the Middle East helped prop up the dollar yesterday, despite bad U.S. trade figures last week.

The currency closed in dull trading at 149.67 yen and 1.8735 Deutschmarks in Europe, after closing in London on Friday at 150 yen and 1.8765 marks. But dealers said they were nervous. (Late New York rates appear under New York Financial Markets on this page.)

People are still undecided, said a senior dealer at a big West German bank in Frankfurt.

The markets were unsure how much importance to attach to a big U.S. trade deficit for June of $15.5 billion, announced on Friday. In Tokyo, however, several dealers predicted that the large deficit would soon have the effect of depressing the U.S. currency.

The dollar is likely to resume its bearish tone and all to around 140 yen in one or two months, said Tetsuhiko Nakayama, senior manager at the Industrial Bank of Japan.

The larger-than-expected June trade deficit added further evidence of deep-rooted U.S. trade problems and signalled the dollar's long-term weakness.

The gold price was little changed and was fixed in London this afternoon at $453.36 an ounce. It had closed on Friday at $454.25 after a sharp fall-off at the end of the week. Brent crude from the North Sea — a widely traded oil — fell below $19 a barrel for the first time since the beginning of July, with oil for October delivery confirmed sold at $18.83, traders said. Weekend news of a supply ship hit by a mine and an explosion at a Saudi gas plant had little impact as market attention focused on crude supplies.

Moshav bank to be shut from Sunday

The Moshav Movement was stripped yesterday of another asset, as the Bank of Israel decided to close down the Moshav Bank for Mortgages and Investments. The decision is effective from Sunday.

The central bank noted yesterday that the Moshav Bank had not been active since 1982 and had merely collected debts and repaid liabilities. Its balance sheet totalled NIS4.3 million at the end of 1986. It had no private depositors; its resources all came from institutions. The bank was established to finance the building operations of the moshavim.

The central bank added that Governor Michael Bruno and Banks Examiner Galia Maor had made known their intentions to the Moshav Bank a year ago.

A LABOUR DISPUTE was declared at the Dale Electronics Industries factory by the Dimona Labour Council yesterday following management refusal to sign a collective work agreement at the plant. The factory's management wants workers to sign personal contracts.

EXPORTS OF PUBLICATIONS and related goods marked their first year-on-year increase in four years, the Ministry of Industry and Trade reported yesterday. It said overseas sales of Israeli-made newspapers, books, writing instruments and various printed products came to $12.5 million in the first seven months of the year, compared with $9.4m. a year earlier.

In 1986, exports in the category amounted to just $16m., compared with $22m. in 1983, according to statistics compiled by the ministry's paper division. If exports continue at their current levels, it added, exports this year should match the 1983 figure.

GREENBRIAR INDUSTRIES, the U.S. unit of Tel Aviv-based Eagle Military Gear Ltd., said last week it had received a $6.3 million order from the U.S. Army for overalls for pilots. Eagle said the order was bigger than a previous tender won by the company several months ago and would add significantly to the company's profitability.

The company expects to complete the contract by next March.
